I. Course Description

This course will provide an opportunity to examine some of the broader issues related to money, and how they influence our lives. The biblical, theological and historical approaches to money and possessions in the church will be studied.

II. COURSE OBJECTIVES

1. With the exception of the annual stewardship drive or occasional capital campaign, money is most often ignored by the local church. Yet the effect that it silently exerts on the life of the local congregation is significant. This class will look at some of the spiritual challenges that money presents, and how they affect both the typical parishioner as well as the typical pastor.
2. To become acquainted with the biblical and historical background relating to money and possessions.
3. To be introduced to theological approaches to money, and to become familiar with concepts in the current debate.
4. To explore the classical spiritual disciplines, and how they might offer healing and refreshment in relation to money and possessions.
5. To reflect on one's own experience regarding money, and the extent to which those experiences influence one's current approach and understanding of money.
6. To have a very complete and practical view of one's own financial condition, and a clear set of goals to be accomplished over time.
7. To become aware of the variety of organizations and tools available for teaching and discipleship in the area of money for the local congregation.
8. To formulate a leadership plan for each student's congregation/ministry.

III. COURSE REQUIREMENTS

Pre-Seminar

1. Students will read in advance 750 pages from the attached bibliography of books. Books from the required list that have been read previously should be substituted by books from the recommended list in that same category.
2. A one page reflection on each book read is DUE ON THE FIRST DAY OF CLASS. That reflection should include your wrestling with one or more of the major concepts of the book, and conclude with your evaluation of the value of that book.
3. A five page money journal is ALSO DUE ON THE FIRST DAY OF CLASS. That journal is your account of the effect that money has had on your life. Start with the earliest memories of money in your childhood, and trace the themes and challenges as they develop. Note especially times of pain and joy. Include your wrestling with biblical texts as they have seemed relevant to you, and what it is like leading a ministry/congregation in regard to money. Also include your current financial situation. How does your family feel? Is money a blessing or curse? Are you well or poorly paid? Are you generous? How do you compare yourself to the rest of your congregation?
4. Students will come prepared to read to the class their money journal entries. While you should feel free to edit out parts of your journal you would feel uncomfortable sharing with a group, please keep in mind that honest and open conversation about this difficult topic will be a gift to the class. It will be of significant help in deepening our appreciation of the place that money and possessions play in the life of the ministry leader. It will also help us to identify themes and struggles that will be critical to developing a healing and realistic ministry.

5. Students will have worked through the suggested assignments in Ron Blue's book, Master Your Money, so that in coming to class they will have a complete picture of their own financial standing. They should also have consulted their most recent statement from Social Security, as well as from the Church Pension Fund (if it applies) and any other investment or retirement accounts. PLEASE BRING THIS INFORMATION WITH YOU.

Post-Seminar

The final project will be to write an 8-10 page, double spaced (12 font) statement of a distinctly Christian approach to money and possessions. That statement should include:

- 1) An examination of the relevant biblical texts,
- 2) An application of at least one major theological concept,
- 3) An appeal to precedent from church history,
- 4) A reflection of one's own personal experience,
- 5) A use of at least one traditional spiritual discipline,
- 6) At least one personal application,
- 7) A plan or initiative in financial ministry for your local congregation.

This paper will be due 2 weeks after the end of the class.

IV. COURSE EVALUATION

1. The one page reflection on each book read due on the first day of class will count for 25% of the final grade.
2. The five page money journal also due on the first day of class will count for 25% of the final grade.
3. Completion of suggested assignments in Ron blue's book, Master Your Money, is to be completed and brought to class. This will count towards 25% of your final grade.
4. The final essay to be submitted no later than July 25, 2008 will count 25% towards your final grade.

VII. THE INSTRUCTOR

Revised April 22, 2008

The Rev. Dr. Todd Cederberg, ChFC, is Senior Associate for Stewardship and Financial Ministries at The Church of the Good Samaritan in Paoli, PA. He was ordained in 1986 and has been in parish ministry for over 20 years. As a priest early on he recognized the financial pressure he himself felt trying to provide for his growing family, and so identified with the experience of numbers of his parishioners who were looking for help in this same area. As a result he pursued his Doctor of Ministry degree from Fuller Seminary in Pasadena, California, graduating in 2004. His focus was on the theological and spiritual influence of money in the local church. Feeling the need to round out his education in the area of financial planning, he also completed a program of study through The American College, and was licensed as a financial planner (ChFC) in 2005. He currently serves on the board of the Christian Stewardship Network (CSN), a national organization that encourages stewardship and financial ministry in very large, evangelical congregations.
